Bali Hash House Harriers 2
Run No 886 – 10th January 2009 Banjar Tunon
Hares; Gay Gordon assisted by Spank My Monkey

It was wet, wet, wet out in the sawah today!

This is a good site but doesn't have any rain protection and after a heavy sky all day it finally opened at about 4:00 pm. The hounds hung around like a load of drowned rats under a big banyan tree that gave no protection at all. Freezing cold they pleaded to set off early.

2 runs today setting off in different directions – very few chose the long which was a shame because it was relatively none squishy underfoot. In fact on the squishy scale it was probably only a 2.

As the hounds set off the hare was fighting his way back across the sawah through the rain storm. "Worst rain I've seen in my life" he said "it hurt when it hit you". Sure enough his bloodshot eyes told a story, a reminder of Captain Arab before the mast in chase of Moby Dick.

"Were you on the piss last night?"
"No" he said indignantly, "it was that bloody rain".

The rain abated after about 30 minutes but it really was a downpour and the flooding through Denpasar the following day show just how much rain fell.

The short run set off North down a valley and up onto some high ground and on to an irrigation canal. Here we followed the canal for about a kilometre, across some open areas to a path and headed south again. We turned West across some paddies and down into a little river valley, a new part of this familiar area. We followed the river valley down past a weir and eventually to an aqueduct named Gordon's Folly. Here the long run came in from the right. Down across the valley and out across open sawah to home.

The long set off South Eastwards down along an irrigation canal, through a little valley then out across the sawah, a good running path which then cut West across a road and down to a little open valley. Across the valley and we headed off to the West. Down into another valley where we headed north picking our way through through mixed country, past a temple and eventually breaking out onto a good path heading north to join the short at Gordon's Folly.

The bedraggled circle collected and started with the Grand Master down downing the hares. Some Hammersley hashers were Hamming it up and declared they don't "take it up the arse" to which someone responded "they take it down the throat".

Visitors and returners were welcomed though who they were we don't know, the rain knackered the run sheet.

The RA started but then the heavens opened again and everyone ran for umbrellas waiting patiently for it to stop. It didn't so we all pissed off home.
