Magnificent! Absolutely magnificent! This run proved that hashing in Bali must be the best in the world with wonderful trails through stunning country and a glorious sunny day to boot.

Disco Wanker took out 4 very enthusiastic virgin hares to show them the ropes. They all had a great time and set a great run. Sadly many of the ignorant bastards who set off at 4:30 didn't follow the paper taking a short cut across a rice field and missed the split which was marked very clearly with 16 foot high white letters on a grassy bank that you had to swerve to avoid (lucky I had my Bridgestone deep tread shoes on that day).

W set off North from the site very quickly turning east up a small valley and onto the rice fields we turned North eventually coming to the edge of a valley to our right. We skirted the edge of the valley at times following a subak and eventually we crossed the subak and onto the rice fields, here the short cutter saw people and set off across the fields not following the paper and so missed the split.

Those highly intelligent, thoroughly capable, none short cutting dedicated hashers easily found the split with its 14 foot high letters in white paint and turned north again while the short runners and the short cutter went off West. Now the run really started dropping into a valley and up the other side, up another valley and out onto a subak along the side of a deep valley the few followed excellent paths with views across to Tampak Siring.

Eventually we climbed some steps into the tiny village of Lumbung where, spray painted onto the road, were arrows and the letters BHHH2. Virgin hares take note, we do not spray paint on roads!

The trail turned south down through rice fields we met the short and headed off down the road. A bit too much bitumen on the last part of the run. And so back to the site.

A great run, well done Disco and the virgin hares. May we have many more well set runs in such good country.

The circle started with an enthusiastic and attentive crowd.

Returners: Marble Balls, Spook, La Bella, Malana, Old Goat, Sticky Saddle, Mud Flaps, A Sholten, J Scholten, Patricia King.

Visitors: Jan V Zeijl, Linden Strong, Dave Crook.

Visiting Hashers: Coops (Hammersley), Geir Eik.

Virgins: Andy McKay, Sarah McKay.

The RA took over with ice and revelry carrying on into darkness. As always the Hammersley man provided a source of considerable entertainment. Everyone was on good form, a good day out in paradise.
